

is optimistic

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist has just been reunited with his friend, Mississippi Peppers, who has found a clue to the location of the lost city of Gold. "You lead the way Mississippi!" Dakota says with a huge smile. Almost overjoyed, the two can't wait to see if this clue pans out!

is hesitant

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist has just been reunited with his friend, Mississippi Peppers, who has found a clue to the location of the lost city of Gold. "What exactly is this clue?" Dakota asks. "Are you sure it's legitimate?" I think. I think I may just keep going toward the river on my own!" He adds, hesitantly.

something happy

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist hears an interesting sound while exploring the jungle of Kuku Lou. Suddenly, through the trees marches his fellow researcher, Mississippi Peppers. "Dakota!" She yells, excitedly. "Follow me! I think I may have found what we're looking for!"

is angry

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist has just been reunited with his friend, Mississippi Peppers, who has found a clue to the location of the lost city of Gold. "WHAT?!" Dakota yells. "Are you trying to steal my discovery Mississippi?" He storms past her angrily before turning around. "You will not take the credit for my discovery!"

is sad

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist has just been reunited with his friend, Mississippi Peppers, who has found a clue to the location of the lost city of Gold. "It's over by the big river!" Mississippi says excitedly. Dakota's excitement turns to despair. "You mean, the golden spoon won by the bank of the river?" Dakota asks, before continuing. "Yeah, I thought that in the gift shop in town a week ago, but lost it one night here on the trail. Guess we're not any closer to finding the lost city of gold!"

he finds something exciting

something startles them

something unexpected happens

is scared

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones stumbles on a seemingly active volcano. Terrified, Dakota turns back the way he came. Running as fast as he can, he sprints through the trees, jumping over rocks and branches. He's sure he can hear the volcano nearing eruption behind him as he runs in a frenzied panic.

is calm

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones stumbles on a seemingly active volcano. Dakota takes a deep breath. Knowing he can't outrun the volcano, he searches for potential shelter, like a rocky cave, or river basin. As the crackling sound grows louder, he finds a large boulder which he climbs to the top of, hoping it will keep him safe from danger.

is brave

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones stumbles on a seemingly active volcano. He knows that if there is a volcano in the jungle, it may hold clues to the lost city of gold that he's been searching for. Quickly, he climbs to the top of the jungle canopy for a better view. Sure enough in the distance he can see smoke billowing from the jungle floor.

quick thinking

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones stumbles on a seemingly active volcano. Remembering that there is a nearby river, Dakota quickly makes his way to the river bank. He takes out a machete from his backpack and chops down as many bamboo stalks as he can. Tying them together with a spare shoelace from his pack, he creates a makeshift raft, and begins floating down river, as the crackling sound behind him grows louder.

is angry

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones is interrupted by a mischievous monkey who steals his lunch, and carries it away into the trees. Anggrily, Dakota abandons his search for the lost city of gold, and chases the monkey through the jungle. Putting aside branches, and running over creek beds, Dakota chases it until he reaches the edge of the evergreen jungle, and comes to what appears to be an ancient cave wall, filled with hieroglyphics, but the monkey is nowhere in sight!

is laughing

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones is interrupted by a mischievous monkey who steals his lunch, and carries it away into the trees. Dakota laughs and calls to the monkey, "Here buddy!" He says, as he holds up a candy bar from his pocket. "There's more, if you want it!" He coaxes, looking up into the canopy overhead, in search of his mischievous new friend.

is undetected

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones is interrupted by a mischievous monkey who steals his lunch, and carries it away into the trees. Underdetected, Dakota continues his search for the lost city of gold, deciding he can eat the candy bar in his pocket for lunch instead.

is tired

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones is interrupted by a mischievous monkey who steals his lunch, and carries it away into the trees. "I give up," Dakota says with a heavy sigh. "I've walked in circles for hours, and now I have no lunch." With that, he plops down on the ground beside a large tree. In the shade, he quickly falls asleep, exhausted from the long hike through the jungle.

is excited

Dakota Jones, a famous archaeologist, just found a huge, golden door, deep in the jungle of Kuku Lou. Jumping with excitement, he runs toward the door, pushing it quickly open. Inside, the doors is giant, 30 foot tall statue of a gorilla. Dakota can hardly believe his eyes. However, moments later, the ground beneath him begins to rumble.

is careful

Dakota Jones, a famous archaeologist, just found a huge, golden door, deep in the jungle of Kuku Lou. Having watched too many movies as a child, Dakota's first instinct is to look for hidden dooby traps that might be triggered if he opens the doors. He carefully tiptoes towards the door, watching the ground in front of him as he gains, taking inches closer.

is afraid

Dakota Jones, a famous archaeologist, just found a huge, golden door, deep in the jungle of Kuku Lou. Spurring, Dakota sees an inscription across the door. "All who enter, may never leave." Jumping backward in fear, Dakota lands on his back, before scrambling back up to his feet, and backing away from the door slowly looking around in each direction to see if he's being watched.

is greedy

Dakota Jones, a famous archaeologist, just found a huge, golden door, deep in the jungle of Kuku Lou. Dakota rubs his hands together, a giant grin creeping across his face. He rushes towards the door, pushing it open. Inside, there is even more gold! Coins, pottery and statues. Fantically, Dakota begins stuffing everything he can find into his backpack, imagining all the things he is going to buy once he returns home.

is hapless

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist drops his only compass in a river, while exploring the Kuku Lou jungle. In despair, Dakota slumps down on the edge of the river and begins to cry. Without his compass, he is completely lost. He may not be able to find the lost city of gold, or even find his way back home! He lays down, in the mud, thinking all is lost.

is happy

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist drops his only compass in a river, while exploring the Kuku Lou jungle. He lunge after his compass, but misses it, falling into the river. He reaches down and grabs what looks like his compass from the river bed, although probably ruined by the water. When he pulls it up, glimmering in the sunlight, he can see that it's a solid gold coin! "What luck! The lost city of gold must be this way!" He exclaims.

is angry

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist drops his only compass in a river, while exploring the Kuku Lou jungle. Angriy, he takes off his backpack and throws it into the river too! In an instant, he realizes what a stupid decision that was, and jumps into the river after his backpack, which carries him quickly downstream.

is fast

Dakota Jones, the famous archaeologist drops his only compass in a river, while exploring the Kuku Lou jungle. He quickly jumps in after it and is able to pluck the compass from the water. Climbing back onto the river bank, he looks at his compass to figure out which way to go. Little does he know, due to the water in the compass, it's leading him in the wrong direction!

something frustrating

While Exploring the Kuku Lou jungle, archaeologist Dakota Jones is startled by a cracking sound. Turning toward the sound, he finds that a mischievous monkey has climbed on his backpack, stolen his lunch, and taken it to the top of the jungle canopy!

Deep in the unexplored jungles on the island of Kuku Lou, the famous archaeologist and researcher, Dakota Jones has been searching for the lost civilization of Kuku, rumored to be a city built out of solid gold. But suddenly, he hears a loud crackling sound coming from behind him.

Dakota makes his way through the front of the town. Ragged Snag just out of the untamed jungle like a flourishing oasis and a barren desert. The dusty streets are lined on either side with small, wooden shops and houses, in various degrees of decay. A large clock towers above the streets in the middle of town. The locals are busy going about their daily business. A booming voice from behind him calls out, "Ier not from found here are ya?" Dakota turns slowly around, facing a large man, wearing a cowdoy hat, and sporting a thick, brown mustache. How do you respond?

defensively

108 Dakota steps toward the man. "Yeah, maybe I'm not. But what it to you?" He asks, as he stares the man in the eyes. "I'm Dakota Jones, most famous explorer and archaeologist! And I'm here to find the lost city of gold!" When Dakota finishes, the man simply stares at him, shaking his head. "Well, you ain't the first to try," He says. "But yer better off lookin' fer Big Foot, or that here Loch Ness Monster." The towns people laugh at the remark. "Only I ever seen with any gold is down yonder at the bank."

friendly

115 "No I'm not, I'm Dakota. Dakota Jones! It's nice to meet you sir!" Dakota says, and reaches out, shaking the man's hand. "Ain't a whole lot a visitors in these parts!" The man responds with a friendly smile. "Tell ya what, I bet you ain't never seen a good pig rag here ya?" Folks like this. This town has the best pig races you ever seen. Maybe you'll even win a dollar!" The man says with a hearty, deep throated chuckle. "Then, you can rest for the night at my place!"

153

boulders, crevasse

Climbing higher, Dakota finally reaches Potter's Ridge. The unforgiving rocky terrain juts in and out, with large boulders often blocking the way. Finally, Dakota comes to a clearing, with tall, yellow grass, and a few berry bushes. He leans up against one of the boulders, and reaches down, grabbing a handful of berries from the adjacent bush. "Mmm... this is delicious," He says, as he catches his breath. Just then, he notices something rustling just behind the bushes. Dakota decides to hide, but where?

172

north, prospector_mine

Dakota realizes his last chance of finding fame and fortune probably lie at the Old Prospector's Mine. Continuing north, he takes a dusty trail that weaves and winds around the mountain. It's overgrown and sometimes it's hard to tell where the trail goes, as it almost disappears under branches and leaves. Up ahead, he sees a place of wood cut of the main trail. Upon closer inspection, he can make out the faint words, "Mine Shaft" carved into it with probably a dull knife. Maybe he should follow the sign, or get back on the main trail.

173

north, piney bluff

174

follow, sign

Dakota walks a few more feet before falling through the dusty, half covered forest floor into an overgrown and previously covered mine shaft. 20 feet down in the hole, he is this helplessly to get a cell phone signal, but to no avail. He realizes now what the sign meant. This is a mine shaft. Hopefully a passerby will notice. Or maybe someone will come looking for him. Only time will tell.

175

follow, trail

102

Get cleaned up

"I need to get back on the trail!" Dakota mumbles to himself. He turns away from the crowd and sees a small well in the middle of the town street, between the worn and weathered buildings. Dakota makes his way there, drawing a bucket of water from the firdgill well, and pouring it on himself, washing the slop off. At the bottom of the bucket, he squirts, seeing a fleck of pure gold.

105

Get local help

The Jungle

Dakota just laughed it off. "Anybody know where the lost city of gold is?" He asks with a chuckle. The villagers roll their eyes. This obviously isn't the first time a prospector or explorer has come through, searching for the fabled, but likely imaginary city of gold. An old gentleman in a rocking chair calls out, "There's gold in them hills north of here, bout a mile yonder." He says, pointing toward the north of town.

109

The Bank

The Jungle

That gives Dakota an idea. If he can't find gold buried in the jungle, maybe he can just take it from the bank. "Thanks old time!" Dakota says, before turning toward the local bank. He strolls across the street, and goes inside the old wooden building with a sign that says "Bank" on the front in painted white letters. He looks around, seeing a large safe in the back room. "That must be it!" He says out loud. "What's it?" The bank manager asks, who overhears Dakota's excitement.

110

The map store

To the Pigs

Dakota shrugs, disappointed. Looking down the street, he sees a run down building, with the door barely still on the hinges, two shattered windows on either side, with a small wooden sign out front with the words, "Map Store" hand painted on it. "Ah, just what I need!" He says, before turning toward the store. He walks in, and looks for maps of the jungle. He has a hunch that the ruins near the river might be his best bet. Finding the map he needs, he scrolls the paper and spreads it out on a table to inspect it.

115

The Jungle

The stranger, who's the locals call "Bluish-Bill" leads Dakota to the edge of town, where the pig races are held. Sure enough, there's a small track, with wooden stalls on one side, separating the pigs, a waist high picket fence the edge of the track, with locals standing around betting on which pig will win. A pistol fires and off the pigs go! Screams and shouts shatter the air, mixed with the squeal of excited pigs. "It's cool ya a dollar, if ya wanna get in on the action!" Business says, pointing over to the squalling pigs.
